Canadian Labour Archives: Some Recent Acquisitions

Danny Moore

SINCE THE LAST SET OF ARCHIVAL NOTES in Spring 1980, Nancy Stunnen resigned from her position as Labour Archives Coordinator at the Public Archives of Canada. Nancy has recently joined the staff of the Manitoba Provincial Archives of Canada as their manuscript archivist. Among her many duties, she will be responsible for the preservation of labour and other working-class records generated in the Province of Manitoba.

Throughout the past summer, several provinces have completed surveys of labour union offices. Preliminary reports indicate that some interesting collections have been located and negotiations are underway to archive these records. The success of these surveys has been the result of close cooperation between archivist, researchers, and trade unionists.

At Laurentian University, The Sudbury Area Industrial Relations and Labour Archives were officially opened in 1981. Its goal is to preserve labour records from the Sudbury region and Northern Ontario. Several important collections have already been acquired and will be reported on in our next issue.

The following report describes some recent acquisitions of labour records and related collections. It has been compiled from entries in the 1978-80 Supplement to the Union List of Manuscripts in Canadian repositories and from articles, correspondence, and notes from archivists across Canada. Many of these collections have not been processed and access to these records is often governed by restrictions. Researchers are urged to contact the institutions concerned for more information.

Once again I would like to thank the archivists from across Canada who assisted me in the preparation of this report.
