MICHELLE WANG

MICHELLE WANG

Michelle Wang is an educator of Visual Arts and Sciences. Growing up, she found inspiration from her grandmother's botanical classroom and exhibited a deep appreciation for art at an early age. Her innate curiosity and creative spirit led her to obtain a dual degree in Visual Arts and Biological Sciences from Queen's University and a Masters of Education specializing in Curriculum studies and development from Ontario Institute for Studies in Education at the University of Toronto. She has taught for more than ten years in both private and international schools in Hong Kong and Canada in Visual Arts, Biology, and Theory of Knowledge across different curricula from IB, IGCSE, and OSSD.

Michelle is currently teaching middle school art at the Canadian International School of Hong Kong. Her current interests range from interdisciplinary education, sustainability, and healing through art. With a deep commitment to education, Michelle is part of the Asia Art Archive Hong Kong arts educator committee collaborating with and learning from other like-minded arts educators in local workshops and exhibitions. Beyond the classroom, she works on charitable art projects in her community, loves trail trekking and island exploration in Asia, and aspires to become an art-yoga therapist in the near future.
