The International Journal of Whole Person Care

Considering life through death - introduction to lessons of life

Yusuke Takamiya

Volume 11, Number 1S, Supplement, 2024

Congress 2023

URI: https://id.erudit.org/iderudit/1110232ar
DOI: https://doi.org/10.26443/ijwpc.v11i1.391

See table of contents

Publisher(s)
McGill University Library

ISSN
2291-918X (digital)

Explore this journal

Cite this document
https://doi.org/10.26443/ijwpc.v11i1.391
CONSIDERING LIFE THROUGH DEATH - INTRODUCTION TO LESSONS OF LIFE

Yusuke Takamiya
Department of Medical Education, Showa University School of Medicine, Tokyo, Japan
yumesuke@mvb.biglobe.ne.jp

Keywords: Palliative care, Death

I am a palliative care physician for 30 years. And I have been teaching "Lessons of Life" to medical students and elementary, junior high, and high school students for 30 years. Based on the words left behind by the deceased patient, these are classes to think about life through death. I would like to introduce some of the lectures at this conference.

When I took care of a 23-year-old female terminal cancer patient, her pain of bone metastasis, which could not be removed, was relieved by a wedding ceremony. I was taught that pain is relieved not by drugs but by supporting the hopes and dreams of patients. A 21-year-old woman with cancer, who had not been told of her prognosis, realized that she was dying and left a letter for her mother. She wrote, "I am glad I was born as your daughter" with gratitude. A 17-year-old high school male student, who had a brain tumor, left a diary. In the diary, he wrote, "If I were to die tomorrow, what would I do today? All I can do now is to live my life to death as I am." An 18-year-old woman, battling rhabdomyosarcoma, said, "Walking, talking, seeing, hearing, laughing, crying, and living. You may think it's normal as someone who always takes it for granted, but that's not the case." Through the words and actions left behind by my patients, I learn that we are living a day that is irreplaceable.