Preface

It is beyond the intended scope of this bibliography to provide a comprehensive compilation of urban history research for the years 1987-1988. Nonetheless, one could readily argue that this compilation is a fair representative sample of the international literature for these years, and, as such, an attempt to provide at least limited bibliographical control to a burgeoning interdisciplinary literature. Since Urban History Review is concerned with the historical evolution of urban Canada in a broad sense, an added effort has been made to include Canadian material.

Method of Compilation

Computerized literature searches were done on: Historical Abstracts; America: History and Life; and the holdings of the Library of Congress, the most complete universal bibliography for monographs. In addition, the following material was manually searched:

- Anthropology; Plan Canada; Register of the following material was manually searched:
- and Life:
- and the holdings of the Library of Congress;
- History and Related Subjects; Urban Affairs Post-Graduate Dissertations in Progress in Canada; the most complete universal bibliography for the years 1987-1988. Nonetheless, one could readily argue that this compilation is a fair representative sample of the international literature for these years, and, as such, an attempt to provide at least limited bibliographical control to a burgeoning interdisciplinary literature. Acknowledgements

Thanks are in order to Linda Michtics of the Reference Department of McMaster University for assisting with the computerized literature searches. Thanks are also in order to Dr. John Weaver, Department of History, McMaster University, for assisting with the planning of the bibliography, and for vetting less significant material. Erica Giese checked the German titles.
