Our Contributors/Nos Auteurs

Carl Betke is Assistant Professor of History at Camrose Lutheran College. Several of his articles have considered themes in the histories of the Mounted Police and of the United Farmers of Alberta; some have presented his most recent work on Edmonton as an example of the development of prairie urban community in Canada.

W.J.C. Cherwinski teaches history at Memorial University of Newfoundland. His previous articles have appeared in the Canadian Historical Review, the Journal of Canadian Studies/Revue d'études canadiennes, and Labour/Le travailleur. He is preparing a monograph on prairie farm labour before the Depression.

C. Rod Day received his B.A. from Stanford and his M.A. and Ph.D. from Harvard. He has been teaching at Simon Fraser University, where he is now an associate professor, since 1966. During the past several years, he has published a series of articles on French education in English, Canadian, and American books and journals.

Peter DeLottinville completed his M.A. in History at Dalhousie University and worked as a research assistant in Ottawa on nineteenth-century Ontario working class history with funding from the Ontario Historical Studies Series. He is now employed in the Manuscript Division, Public Archives of Canada.

Julian Gwyn is Professor of History at the University of Ottawa, where he has taught since 1961. Between 1972 and 1979, he was associate editor of Histoire sociale-Social History. He is author of The Enterprising Admiral. The Personal Fortune of Admiral Sir Peter Warren (1974), and he has edited The American Manuscripts in the Gage Collection (1971), The Royal Navy and North America . . . 1736-1752 (1975), and La chute de Louisbourg . . . 1745 (1978).

Royden Harrison, M.A., D.Phil., is Professor of Social History and Director of the Centre for the Study of Social History, University of Warwick. He is the co-founder in 1960 and remains co-editor of the Bulletin of the Society for the Study of Labour History. Aside from many books and articles already published, he is the authorized biographer of Sidney and Beatrice Webb, and a Fellow of the Royal Historical Society.

Herbert J. Mays teaches history at the University of Winnipeg. His articles have appeared in the Canadian Historical Review and Histoire sociale-Social History. His current research focuses on the history of the family in Canada and the early settlement of Manitoba.

HISTORICAL PAPERS 1980 COMMUNICATIONS HISTORIQUES

Barbara C. Murison is a doctoral candidate at the University of Western Ontario. She has written for the Journal of Imperial and Commonwealth History on Upper Canadian history and is now investigating politics and administration in England and the Atlantic colonies, 1675-1707.
