
Our Contributors/Nos auteurs

Ottawa 1982
Volume 17, numéro 1, 1982

URI : id.erudit.org/iderudit/030893ar

DOI : 10.7202/030893ar

Aller au sommaire du numéro

Éditeur(s)

The Canadian Historical Association/La Société historique du Canada

ISSN 0068-8878 (imprimé)
1712-9109 (numérique)

Découvrir la revue

Citer cet article

(1982). Our Contributors/Nos auteurs. Historical Papers, 17(1), 228–229. doi:10.7202/030893ar

All rights reserved © The Canadian Historical Association/La Société historique du Canada, 1982

Ce document est protégé par la loi sur le droit d'auteur. L'utilisation des services d'Érudit (y compris la reproduction) est assujettie à sa politique d'utilisation que vous pouvez consulter en ligne. [<https://apropos.erudit.org/fr/usagers/politique-dutilisation/>]

Cet article est diffusé et préservé par Érudit.

Érudit est un consortium interuniversitaire sans but lucratif composé de l'Université de Montréal, l'Université Laval et l'Université du Québec à Montréal. Il a pour mission la promotion et la valorisation de la recherche. www.erudit.org

Our Contributors/Nos Auteurs

John Carland received his Ph. D. in British Empire and Commonwealth History from the University of Toronto and has been teaching at the University of Kentucky since 1977. He has published articles on colonial administrative history in Albion and The International History Review and has recently completed a monograph on the Colonial Office and British policy in Nigeria before 1914.

Craig Heron teaches history at York University. His previous articles have appeared in the Canadian Historical Review and Labour/Le Travailleur. He was co-author of All That Our Hands Have Done: A Pictorial History of the Hamilton Workers. At present he is preparing an industry-wide study of Canadian steelworkers between 1880 and 1930.

John Leslie, a public historian, is Chief of the Treaties and Historical Research Centre, Corporate Policy, Indian and Northern Affairs Canada. He is particularly interested in the role of public or applied history as the key link in the planning, formulation and development of contemporary government policies. This article is drawn, in part, from his current investigation of the political, economic and social conditions of Indian people in eastern British North America in the three decades prior to Confederation.

Mary Lynn McDougall has a joint appointment in the History Department and Women's Studies Programme at Simon Fraser University. She has written extensively on the workers' movement in Lyon, France in the July Monarchy and Second Republic. She is currently researching and writing a book on protective labour legislation for women during the Third Republic.

Chad Gaffield teaches history at the University of Victoria. During the past several years, he has published articles concerning the character of social structure in nineteenth century Canada, the history of childhood and the family, and the history of education. He is on the editorial board for volume III of the Historical Atlas of Canada Project.

Marianne McLean is a free-lance historian, presently living in Ottawa. She was recently awarded a Ph. D. by the University of Edinburgh for her thesis analysing Highland emigration to Glengarry County, Ontario.

Hector Mackenzie is Assistant Professor of History at the University of Toronto. He received his B.A. from the University of Toronto and his D. Phil. from Oxford University. He is now working on a study of post-war Anglo-Canadian relations.

HISTORICAL PAPERS 1982 COMMUNICATIONS HISTORIQUES

Ian Radforth is a doctoral candidate in History at York University where he is completing a dissertation on the logging industry of northern Ontario in the twentieth century. He has recently published in Labour/Le Travailleur and in Polyphony.

Graham D. Taylor is Associate Professor of History at Dalhousie University. He is the author of The New Deal and American Indian Tribalism, and a forthcoming book on DuPont and the international chemical industry. He has published articles on international business history in The Business History Review, Prologue and International History Review.

Marcel Trudel, professeur émérite de l'Université d'Ottawa, a enseigné aux universités Laval, Carleton et d'Ottawa. Il a, de plus, été conférencier invité dans diverses universités étrangères: Sorbonne, Institut catholique de Paris, Poitiers, Gênes et Messine. Il a participé à de nombreuses entreprises de publication, dans certaines en tant que fondateur, dans d'autres, en tant que directeur. Il compte de nombreux ouvrages à son actif dont plusieurs ont été couronnés d'un prix: David en 1945 et 1951, Casgrain en 1961, Concours littéraires et scientifiques du Québec en 1963 et 1966, Duvernay en 1966, Gouverneur Général en 1967, Montcalm en 1976 et Molson en 1980; il a aussi été récipiendaire des médailles Léo-Pariseau et Tyrrell en 1960 et 1964 respectivement. Marcel Trudel est membre de l'Académie canadienne-française et officier de l'Ordre du Canada.