The Dean of Applied Science at Queen's who supported the Pilot Project should be commended. Richardson does not name him. However, for the record, we should know that he was Dr. Robert J. Uffen. Not only do we need more Richardsons in Canada, we need more Uffens!

In his report, Richardson speaks of the problems involved in getting those knowledgeable about inventory items to tell their stories. He describes these problems sympathetically, not critically. Quite recently, I experienced at first hand the interview conducted by one of my family with the owners of a heritage house and the enthusiasm that built up as they described the 120-year development of the structure and its contents. Such enthusiasm is the result of attention being paid to heritage houses. I hope that the work of George Richardson and his 1979 team will help to foster a heritage-type of enthusiasm in more districts of Eastern Canada - and even in the West! Here, perhaps, is something the Engineering Institute Committee can do right away.
