

Journal of the Canadian Historical Association Revue de la Société historique du Canada

Our Contributors/Nos auteurs Nos auteurs

Volume 7, numéro 1, 1996

URI : <https://id.erudit.org/iderudit/031112ar>

DOI : <https://doi.org/10.7202/031112ar>

Aller au sommaire du numéro

Éditeur(s)

The Canadian Historical Association/La Société historique du Canada

ISSN

0847-4478 (imprimé)

1712-6274 (numérique)

Découvrir la revue

Citer ce document

(1996). Our Contributors/Nos auteurs. Journal of the Canadian Historical Association / Revue de la Société historique du Canada, 7(1), 289–290.
<https://doi.org/10.7202/031112ar>

All rights reserved © The Canadian Historical Association/La Société historique du Canada, 1997

Ce document est protégé par la loi sur le droit d'auteur. L'utilisation des services d'Érudit (y compris la reproduction) est assujettie à sa politique d'utilisation que vous pouvez consulter en ligne.

<https://apropos.erudit.org/fr/usagers/politique-dutilisation/>

érudit

Cet article est diffusé et préservé par Érudit.

Érudit est un consortium interuniversitaire sans but lucratif composé de l'Université de Montréal, l'Université Laval et l'Université du Québec à Montréal. Il a pour mission la promotion et la valorisation de la recherche.

<https://www.erudit.org/fr/>

Our Contributors

Nos auteurs

Nadia Fahmy-Eid est professeure titulaire au département d'histoire de l'Université du Québec à Montréal depuis 1970. Elle a fait ses études en histoire à l'Université Laval (B.A.), puis à l'Université McGill (M.A.) et enfin à l'Université de Montréal (Ph.D.). Elle est spécialisée en histoire des idéologies au Québec et au Canada, pour le 19^e et le 20^e siècle, ainsi qu'en histoire des femmes (éducation et travail) et aussi en épistémologie de l'histoire. Ses publications ainsi que son enseignement au cours couvrent surtout ces deux derniers champs de spécialisation.

Daniel Byers is a doctoral candidate in the Department of History at McGill University. He is currently completing his thesis on the National Resources Mobilization Act and Canada's compulsory military training system during the Second World War.

Janet E. Chute holds graduate degrees in history, archaeology and social and cultural anthropology. She teaches Native studies, ethnohistory, cultural anthropology and sociology, and is presently associated in a research capacity with graduate faculties in the Schools of Resource and Environmental Studies and International Development Studies at Dalhousie University. She is also actively involved in historical research for the Canadian Mi'kmaq and Ojibwa First Nations.

Stephen Heathorn, a graduate of the University of Toronto and McMaster University, currently teaches at the University of Toronto and at the University of Windsor. He is the author of several articles on nationalism and education in late-nineteenth-century England. In August of 1997 he will be taking-up the appointment of Assistant Professor of History at Indiana University at Indianapolis (IUPUI).

Matthew Hendley holds a BA (Honours) in History and Political Studies from Queen's University and an MA in History from McGill University. He is currently a PhD candidate in the Department of History at the University of Toronto. His dissertation is a study of the evolution of popular patriotism and imperialism in Great Britain during the First World War and the 1920s.

Steve Hewitt is a doctoral candidate in history at the University of Saskatchewan. He is also working on a book for the University of Toronto Press on the history of RCMP surveillance work on the campuses of Canadian universities.

Valerie J. Korinek is an Assistant Professor of History at the University of Saskatchewan. A scholar in the field of Canadian cultural and gender history, she is working on a manuscript about Chatelaine magazine in the 1950s and 1960s, entitled Roughing It in Suburbia, for University of Toronto Press.

Louise Mussio is a doctoral candidate at McMaster University. She is completing a thesis on the culture of religious dissent in nineteenth-century Central Canada.

Jennifer Read is a doctoral candidate in Canadian environmental history at the University of Western Ontario. Her paper is drawn from her dissertation, "'A Quiet Horror': Water Pollution in the Great Lakes, 1909-1972."

John Sainsbury is an Associate Professor and Chair of the History Department at Brock University. He is working on various aspects of the career of John Wilkes.

Michael D. Stevenson received his PhD from the University of Western Ontario in 1996. Currently, he is a SSHRCC Post-Doctoral Fellow at Trent University studying the development of occupational training and vocational education programmes in Canada since 1945.

David A. Sutherland teaches in the Department of History at Dalhousie University, specialising in topics relating to nineteenth-century Nova Scotia.