Black-faced Honeycreeper

Mikayla Heiss

Sweetbitter unmanageable creature who steals in, what brought your demise? The books cannot say. Only faded ink bears your image. A black mask wraps around your eyes. The beak that sings forgotten melodies is closed to the reader.

Have you truly left?
15 years since a sighting. Your still form consumes our memory. Now, inured scientists sit round the table, choking down Blue Hawaii. Your homeland sighs. What have they lost?

Extinct?
Scientists stare at the data, weighing the title.
